“It Gives Me the Sense of Being Involved”: Using Tech to Connect

By Jennifer Bransford-Koons
Director, Aging & Independence Services

When she was working as an educator, Laura Arzave’s world was full of social connection. Whether she was teaching preschoolers or elementary-aged students, there were always young people, parents, and colleagues to connect with. A few years ago, however, Laura had to stop working due to physical disabilities. She enrolled with the In-Home Supportive Services (IHSS) program.

IHSS helps older adults and persons with disabilities living on a low income to remain living safely at home. IHSS recipients receive assistance with basic needs, such as cleaning the house, laundry, preparing meals, bathing, grooming, and getting dressed. While some IHSS recipients have robust support systems and the ability to leave their homes regularly, others are homebound and have few social connections. The COVID-19 pandemic deepened the isolation some IHSS recipients had already been experiencing.

In response, the County of San Diego created the IHSS:Tech2Connect program. The goal of Tech2Connect is to provide technology, training, and access to social engagement and mental health resources to some of the region’s most vulnerable older adults and persons living with disabilities. Currently, the program is open to active IHSS recipients who live alone.

Laura was eager to become involved with Tech2Connect. She admits, “It can be very lonely. I wasn’t going out as much. I wasn’t socializing as much as I probably should’ve.”

Tech2Connect is run by an AIS contractor, Sarsis Health and Technology Solutions, with funding from the American Rescue Plan Act (ARPA) and a California Department of Aging Access to Technology (ATT) grant. This temporary program began in 2022, and to date, over 1,000 participants have received a tablet, training, and resource materials. Participants, including Laura, have reported life-changing impacts.

Although Laura had access to a cell phone, receiving a tablet opened up new opportunities. “When the teacher came, we downloaded a few apps and one of them was MeetUp. I found a couple of meetings over Zoom I now go to on a monthly basis,” she explains. Laura is now able to meet with new people online who support one another with health goals. She also connects with neighbors through an online neighborhood group. Having an iPad also motivated Laura to go back to school. She is working toward a degree in holistic counseling through a virtual program and hopes to one day open up a private practice. The Tech2Connect instructor taught her how to access documents from “the cloud” so she can complete assignments.

Perhaps most importantly, the program has helped Laura feel closer to her family. “I’m the 8th of nine children and have 27 nieces and nephews,” she explains. “I downloaded the Facebook and Instagram apps [so] I’m able to be up to date on what’s going on with the family. It gives me the sense of being involved.” One of her greatest pleasures has been reading to her two-year-old great nephew over FaceTime (a video-calling app). While Laura admits that navigating life with a disability remains challenging, she appreciates how the Tech2Connect program has helped make life a little bit easier. Like Laura, numerous other participants have reported that Tech2Connect greatly enhances their lives.

Arlinda Jackson, 76, knows full well that life can be full of unexpected twists and turns. After a productive career, first at SDG&E and then as a parent-child counselor at a residential treatment facility for children with behavioral health needs, she was forced into retirement due to health issues. Arlinda eventually had to give up her car due to the high costs of insurance and registration. For awhile she would go out on walks in her neighborhood, but eventually it felt unsafe. “My walking slowed down and the drivers sped up. I have pretty much become homebound,” she explains.

While grateful to have a roof over her head after experiencing “a few seconds of homelessness,” the small studio where she lays her head doesn’t quite feel like home. “I never envisioned [this life] for myself. I miss who I am.”

Yet, Arlinda is bright and resilient. When she learned about Tech2Connect, she was eager to enroll. The program has added a dose of optimism into her life. As an avid reader, Arlinda had found that the print inside books had become too small to read. “When I was offered the iPad, that just...gave me the world of reading back. I got my library card again and got introduced to the world of audiobooks and e-books.”

Arlinda has also been using the iPad to search for a greater sense of community. “I keep looking to be connected with seniors who are full of life.” Although her initial efforts have not yet resulted in the depth of connection she hopes for, Arlinda isn’t giving up. “I believe things happen to you for your growth,” she explains.

While the physical space surrounding Arlinda may have gotten smaller—at least for now—with the help of the iPad, the internet, and the power of her own mind, she is expanding her horizons and working to create a brighter future for herself. “It is a way to be connected to life,” she shares. “I use the iPad every day. I know the beauty of technology and I embrace it. I just hope that others let it open up their world.”

If you are a current IHSS recipient who lives alone and are in need of an up-to-date tablet, data/internet, and/or in-home technology training, call the Tech2Connect information line at (858) 505-6972 to learn more about the program and determine if you are eligible. Please note that funding is limited. The Tech2Connect program currently runs through September 30, 2024.

MESSAGE FROM NEW AIS DIRECTOR, JENNIFER BRANSFORD-KOONS

Happy Summer! I am so happy to be back with Aging & Independence Services (AIS) as the Director. I have spent the majority of my 30-plus-year County career working within AIS in many programs. I am passionate about the important programs and activities that AIS provides for the community. If you ask me “what fills my bucket,” I would say that serving our aging population and helping residents with disabilities to live their best lives is definitely my calling. But I also love supporting staff. Of all my positions in my career, I have always found special enjoyment overseeing operations and supporting staff to help the community and help each other.

My most recent assignment as the Director for the Office of Equitable Communities in the Department of Homeless Solutions and Equitable Communities afforded me an outstanding opportunity to embrace our new County focus of community engagement. I oversaw community engagement programs and outreach efforts in partnership with the community to ensure resources are available and accessible to all, and in ways that are culturally sensitive, trauma informed, and welcoming.

Throughout my career, I’ve been blessed to work with diverse populations and have championed protective and safety net services for vulnerable older adults, children, and families. I look forward to continuing to support our amazing communities!

AIS Director Jennifer Bransford-Koons

COOL ZONES FOR HOT DAYS

Each summer, older adults are encouraged to beat the heat by visiting Cool Zones throughout the county. These air-conditioned sites welcome older adults and persons with disabilities free of charge. Some offer social opportunities or other resources. The effects of heat can be greater on older adults and their bodies may not provide the same warning signs as they did at younger ages. Visit www.CoolZones.org or call 2-1-1 to locate a Cool Zone near you.

People in San Diego County unable to get to a Cool Zone location without transportation assistance, such as older adults and people with disabilities, can call 2-1-1 to be connected to a transportation or rideshare service at no cost.

Homebound individuals may not be able to take advantage of traditional Cool Zone sites. To help community members who are unable to leave home to beat the heat, the County of San Diego, in partnership with SDG&E, provides free electric fans to those who are 60 years of age and older, or disabled, living on limited incomes. Please be advised it is not recommended to rely on electric fans for cooling if temperatures exceed 90 degrees. To fill out an eligibility survey, visit www.CoolZones.org.

HOW TO SUPPORT A HEALTHY BRAIN

Improving your brain health has many positive health outcomes, including reducing your risk of Alzheimer's disease. It can also improve health outcomes for those currently living with the disease. A combination of social activities and healthy habits, when done together, can help preserve and protect brain health. According to the California Department of Public Health's Take on ALZ public awareness campaign, here are some ways to improve brain health:

- Exercise Regularly: Daily cardiovascular exercise increases blood flow to the brain and body, which helps maintain overall health.
- Quit Smoking: Cigarette smoking is associated with an increased risk of cognitive decline and dementia in older adults.
- Eat a Balanced Diet: High blood sugar and a high-fat diet can increase your risk for cognitive decline.
- Keep Your Heart Healthy: Risk factors for cardiovascular disease and stroke — obesity, high blood pressure, and diabetes — can negatively impact your cognitive health.
- Protect Your Brain: Brain injury can raise your risk of cognitive decline and dementia. Wear a seat belt, use a helmet when playing contact sports or riding a bike, and take steps to prevent falls.
- Get Enough Rest: Not getting enough sleep due to conditions like insomnia or sleep apnea may result in problems with memory and thinking.
- Mental Health is Tied to Brain Health: Some studies link a history of depression with an increased risk of cognitive decline, so seek treatment if you have symptoms.
- Stay Social: Interact with family and friends. Volunteer or join a community group.
- Keep on Learning: Keeping an active mind through continuous education, reading, or other stimulating activities can help reduce cognitive decline.
- Continue to Challenge Your Mind: Activities that help you think strategically, such as puzzles and games, are a great way to exercise your brain.

ELDER ABUSE AWARENESS AND PREVENTION: BUILDING STRONG SUPPORT FOR ELDERS

When we come together, we can prevent elder abuse from happening and put supportive services in place to address elder abuse. California law defines elder abuse as physical abuse, neglect, financial exploitation, abandonment, isolation, abduction, or other treatment resulting in harm, pain, or mental suffering to an adult 60 years or older. Every year an estimated 1 in 10 older Americans are victims of elder abuse, neglect, or exploitation. There are many ways to strengthen our social supports through policies, services, and programs that keep us integrated into our communities as we age.

TAKE ACTION!

- Keep in contact and talk with your older friends, neighbors, and relatives frequently. Ask questions and listen. Be aware and alert for the possibility of abuse.
- Make a commitment to volunteer this year! Help older adults in your community.
- Give a caregiver a respite break.
- Ask your church or organization to add information about elder abuse in their newsletters or during a service.
- Share elder abuse prevention and awareness information via social media with your friends and family.

SEEK HELP

If you have concerns about an older adult, or suspect possible elder abuse, call the AIS Call Center at (800) 339-4661. If you are an older adult, one of the best ways to avoid becoming a victim of elder abuse is to stay connected to others. For information about opportunities to stay connected through health promotion and volunteer programs, access to transportation, or phone call reassurance programs, visit www.aging.sandiegocounty.gov or call (800) 339-4661.
