Living Well with “Buddy AL”

By Jennifer Bransford-Koons
Director, Aging & Independence Services

It’s only 11 a.m., but Larry and Janna Wagner have already had quite a full day. The couple has enjoyed a healthy breakfast and some time on the tennis court. Now, music fills the house. Larry leads on piano and Janna joins on the flute. Together they practice songs they’ll be performing the following week to dinner guests experiencing homelessness at the Tuesday evening dinner hosted by the non-profit We See You San Diego.

While on the surface their retirement may sound idyllic, Larry and Janna are working very hard. An uninvited guest, “Buddy AL,” has entered their lives and requires constant accommodation. Buddy AL is the nickname Janna has given to her Alzheimer’s diagnosis and the cognitive challenges she must navigate as a result. It’s a journey that began over 10 years ago when she fell on the tennis court. She hit her head and was diagnosed with a traumatic brain injury. Despite undergoing extensive therapy, Janna permanently lost her ability to read. Unfortunately, she started to experience other cognitive challenges, including problems with thinking and memory, which led to a diagnosis of Alzheimer’s in 2018.

Nobody relishes receiving a diagnosis of Alzheimer’s disease or a related dementia. People often feel frightened or a sense of loss for the future they imagined. When she was first diagnosed, Janna was “so distraught” and suffered from crippling depression. But now, more than six years since her diagnosis, Janna is thriving more than she and Larry could have imagined.

Larry and Janna Wagner

For Janna, living well with Buddy AL takes careful effort and a commitment. She and Larry do all they can to learn about her condition and take steps to improve her health. For instance, the couple decided to follow a low carbohydrate keto diet to reduce inflammation. Janna found that this way of eating helped her cognition and allowed her to function better.

Janna also chooses to stay physically active throughout the day. She’ll go on walks in her neighborhood at the edge of the canyon, practice tennis, or go for a swim. If she realizes she’s been seated for awhile, she’ll jump up and march in place. Janna explains, “research has shown you are keeping your brain going by keeping your circulation going. Jump up! You can’t overrate it.”

Exercising her brain is a key focus, too. Janna regularly tackles puzzles in her Easy Crosswords book with Larry. He lists a clue: “This word starts with ‘C.’ Instead of paying with credit, you pay with...” Janna thinks for a moment and then the answer comes to her: “cash!” Larry will also challenge her with word games, such as asking her to think of twenty words that start with the letter “B.”

Janna has always been an active and involved member of her community and a loving mother to the couple’s quadruplet sons. Known for her empathy and enthusiasm, Janna has positively touched many lives. For many years she and Larry co-owned Wagner’s School of Music, only recently selling the business to one of their sons. She also worked as a schoolteacher, teaching high school math and working with students with disabilities. At one time, she taught students who were considered “severely emotionally disturbed.” It was clear to Janna that school administrators only expected Janna to “babysit” these kids rather than attempt to teach them. Janna, however, had other plans. “I decided, they are going to learn to read... and they did! They were so proud.”

Despite living with Alzheimer’s, Janna is still contributing to the community and enriching others’ lives. She finds that doing the weekly performances to guests experiencing homelessness is a deeply satisfying way to contribute to her community. She is also known as the “Battery Lady” for passing out batteries to the guests for the head lamps they use to navigate at night. Janna recommends that everyone look for ways to serve their community. She notes, “If you want to feel good, go out and help somebody. It gives me a feeling that I can make an impact.”

And, as Janna has discovered, often the most meaningful interactions involve a complex interplay of helping and being helped, giving and receiving. Recently, Janna has been enjoying the company of a medical school student volunteer through Alzheimer’s San Diego’s ALZ Companions program. Janna and her new friend spend time together and learn from one another. The pair talk, go on long walks, and laugh a lot. Through the shared social connection, Janna helps to paint a picture of what it can be like to live well with dementia. Her friend better understands the nuances and humanity that lie behind the often-feared diagnosis. These lessons will help touch countless people that the student will serve in the future. Janna shares, “she thinks the world of me...and that means the world to me.”

Continuing to nurture relationships is key to Janna’s quality of life. She stays in touch with friends and family members. Most importantly, Janna and Larry enjoy a robust and loving marriage. They refer to themselves as “Team Wagner” and are united in their quest to keep Buddy AL under control for as long as possible. As with many couples, Larry finds himself as both a spouse and a caregiver—or perhaps more accurately, a “care partner,” as they work together to meet Janna’s needs. In some ways, Janna’s diagnosis has brought them closer. Larry has had to learn to become more in tune with Janna’s emotional needs and the impact of his words, actions, and tone of voice. For instance, when Janna first started struggling to find the word she intended to say, Larry would quickly jump in to help. This frustrated Janna, so he learned to hold back, giving her the time and space to retrieve the words she wished to express. “Now [he] lets me struggle for it, and that works better,” Janna says.

Janna is a big believer in the power of perseverance and a positive attitude. Janna shares that she doesn’t like being told that she is wrong when she is doing her best. “I don’t ever want to hear ‘no’...it has a really big effect on the psyche. I just want positive statements. They mean so much.” Being surrounded by supportive people helps Janna to persevere to live her best life. One friend told her, “I’ve never seen anyone who is so undaunted.” The label stuck, and now whenever Janna feels down or frustrated, she gets back on track by telling herself, “Stop it! You are UNDAUNTED!” Humor plays a big role too. Larry shares, “We watch a comedy every night. We will repeat some of the lines. That really keeps us going.”

While the positive mindset has been helpful, at some points in her journey Janna has felt like giving up. She recalls, “I would lay down on the floor and I’d say, ‘Jesus, would you just take me and let me go?’” Fortunately, by seeking treatment for depression and turning to her faith, she has been able to overcome dark times.

Being a caregiver can be challenging at times, too. Larry shares, “Sometimes I just have to be alone. I need to go to my office upstairs.” During these moments, Janna may listen to a book using her Kindle e-reader’s voice function or she might call her sister or a friend. Taking care of himself and his needs on a regular basis means Larry can be consistently patient, present, and grounded for Janna. In addition, Larry and Janna each attend a support group offered through UC San Diego’s Shiley-Marcos Alzheimer’s Disease Research Center, one tailored to the needs of people with dementia and the other for caregivers.

Often attributed to Bette Davis, the well-known quip “Old age isn’t for sissies” sums up the unique journeys all people take as they get older, whether or not dementia is in the mix. And while some changes in life are inevitable and dementia brings certain limitations that must be accepted, Janna shares perhaps the most valuable lesson of all: “not accepting the thought that you don’t matter.”

While no one knows what the future holds, one thing is certain. “Team Wagner” is thriving one day at a time, keeping Buddy AL in check.

VOLUNTEER OF THE QUARTER

The Retired and Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP) is proud to announce Richard Rafter as Volunteer of the Quarter. He was nominated by Marie Meese, Administrator of the Volunteer Senior Patrol from San Diego's Sheriff's Poway Station.

On November 20, 2024, Sheriff Martinez awarded Richard a Certificate of Recognition for his dedicated 30 years of service at the Bob Hope Auditorium situated at Marine Corps Air Station Miramar. Throughout his volunteer career, Richard has accumulated an impressive total of 5,283 hours. His commitment and passion for his station and community have made a significant impact, and his service is truly commendable.

Richard's role includes a wide range of essential responsibilities. He participates in regular patrols and sets a high standard for excellence as serving as training coordinator and assistant administrator.

Richard Rafter

As the training coordinator, Richard leads a team of 19 trainers and serves as a vital link for the county-mandated training directed by the staff at Ridgeway Sheriff Headquarters. Richard prepares graduates of the San Diego Sheriff's Volunteer Academy to become proficient patrol members, and ensures that all volunteers are informed of new procedural changes discussed at monthly training meetings. His responsibilities include organizing the training schedule, tracking progress, and maintaining up-to-date documentation, such as the Patrol Guide and the Practical Factors card. The Patrol Guide, which covers the communities of Poway and 4S Ranch, consists of 29 pages of essential information. It provides instructions on operating radios and using the point system to identify foot patrols during communications with dispatch. This guide is used during training and serves as a reference during patrols. Additionally, the Practical Factors card is a one-page document that trainers use to outline various activities covered during the first five ride-along. It includes instructions on logging in and out of a shift on the radio and operating traffic signal control equipment at intersections.

As the assistant administrator at the Poway station, Richard tracks volunteer hours and anniversary dates for recognition, prepares monthly meeting agendas, and represents Poway at county-wide administrative meetings. He is an integral member of the radio training staff for each of the quarterly San Diego Sheriff's Volunteer Academy sessions, fostering strong relationships with the Poway Patrol Sergeant and the station command staff.

Richard's unwavering dedication enhances our community and inspires others to engage in service. Thank you, Richard, for everything you do to serve your community.

CARE MANAGEMENT: MULTIPURPOSE SENIOR SERVICE PROGRAM

Sometimes staying independent in one's home means getting help. That extra help with bill paying, shopping, laundry, and other tasks can keep someone from needing to live in a nursing home. If you or a loved one are age 65+, eligible for Medi-Cal, and need assistance to continue living safely at home, consider applying for the Multipurpose Senior Services Program (MSSP). MSSP care managers work with the client, family members, and medical team to find and coordinate services in the home. Through the timely use of services, MSSP protects frail older adults and helps them live at home for longer.

Care management services include: a comprehensive health and psychosocial assessment; care planning with the client and family; arrangement of services; coordination of care with other community agencies; some limited payment of in-home services; monthly phone contact; quarterly home visits; and ongoing monitoring/phone contacts as needed.

For more information on MSSP or to apply, contact the AIS Call Center at (800) 339-4661 M-F from 8 a.m.-5 p.m.
